The rocky islet of Jubarah is surrounded by a breathtakingly coral belt. Notable for its abundance of birds, who swoop down to the sea in search of food, the marine life found at Jubarah Island is nothing short of spectacular. Schools of colourful fish put on dazzling displays beneath the emerald-green waters and divers can expect to see whitetip sharks and the magnificent silky shark.

The underwater terrain of the three dive sites is equally diverse, offering majestic coral pinnacles close to the shore as well as the exciting drop off area located on the northerly outskirts of the main reef. Reaching depths of 40m and featuring a medium current, the reefs here can occasionally make for challenging swimming.

As such, the dive sites on Jubarah Island are better suited for advanced divers who are confident that their skills can take them safely through the location's many underwater ledges, channels and caves. However, this site is also perfect for freedivers.

The divers that do make it down, however, will be rewarded by an underwater wonderland set in balmy waters of 31°C, while the more than 25m visibility all but guarantees some spectacular marine life sightseeing and the chance for some .....
